We work to encourage and support landholders
to conserve and manage biodiversity on private land in NSW

Over seventy per cent of land in NSW is privately owned and managed. The Biodiversity Conservation Trust helps landholders to better manage biodiversity on this land. Local staff work in partnership with landholders across NSW.

The Biodiversity Conservation Trust will invest $240 million in the period to June 2021 to support landholders who wish to participate in private land conservation.

Landholders who enter voluntary agreements to conserve and manage biodiversity can access a range of funding programs that will diversify income streams, with potential for long-term annual payments.

The process starts with you and the vision you have for your land.

Our local staff will have conversations with you about the areas on your property you want to protect, and how they can support you to manage those areas for biodiversity.
