

Biodiversity on my Land Museum in a Box

The Biodiversity on my Land Museum in a Box has been developed with the Australian Museum. These boxes, which contain a wide variety of hands-on learning activities, are available for hire by schools, community centres and libraries. The boxes encourage students to explore the role of private landholders in protecting biodiversity. It will also highlight the importance of the many under-represented landscapes in NSW, the species found there, their role in the broader landscape's function and the stories of those landholders protecting them.

Who is this for?

The box focuses on biodiversity, conservation and classification in NSW, and encourages students to explore the role of private landholders in protecting biodiversity. The activities within the box are curriculum-linked for students in NESA Stages 1-4 and suggested lessons are provided in the resources.

What is Inside?

These boxes provide students with hands-on learning opportunities and practical experience with a range of biodiversity concepts. Each box contains real museum specimens, games, equipment, dioramas, images, digital resources, books, and teachers notes.

How to Borrow a Box

Museum in a Box is available for a six week loan period for free. If you want to use the box in your schools please do not hesitate to contact us.
